This paper contributes to the literature by describing two separate, small-scale SHS projects implemented in El Salvador. Each project offered solar home systems to a community isolated from the power grid. One project was market-based, designed to demonstrate that poor households could become consumers of these products at going prices.

This paper presents the results of case studies examining two independent projects that worked to bring solar home systems (SHSs) to isolated communities in El Salvador. Both projects were implemented by small nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) that did not have prior experience with SHSs.
